In the Domesday Book of 1086, Robert is listed as the Lord of Belvoir, Lincolnshire. This lordship is considered a feudal barony, making Robert the first Baron of Belvoir. Besides the lands around Belvoir, Robert also received lands in Yorkshire and Leicestershire.

Belvoir Castle is a historic castle and stately home in Leicestershire, England, situated 6 miles (10 km) west of the town of Grantham and 10 miles (16 km) north-east of Melton Mowbray. The Castle was first built immediately after the Norman Conquest of 1066 and has since been rebuilt at least three times, the surviving structure, a grade I listed building, dating from the early 19th century. It is the seat of David Manners, 11th Duke of Rutland (the tiny county of Rutland lies 16 miles (26 km) south of Belvoir Castle), whose direct male ancestor inherited it in 1508.
